This is our first winter in Fairview. So far your department's work in removing the snow from the main streets and highways has been very (A) [inefficient / efficient]. But for whatever reason, the snowplow drivers seem to have decided to deposit much of the snow from up the street in the small cutout that leads to our driveway. (두 번씩이나 저희들은 제 설차에 의해 남겨진 눈으로 된 벽을 파내야 했습니다). This morning, I was (B) [unable / able] to get out of my driveway in time to get the children to school, and had to ask a neighbor for help. I want to set up a meeting with a supervisor at your department to discuss the situation and find a (C) [better / worse] solution for snow removal in this neighborhood. I came home tonight to one of your LED streetlights in front of my home. This daytime-like light is super bright and (A) [fill / fills] my house with unnecessary light at night. It also pollutes the night sky and washes out any chance of seeing stars—one of the reasons I moved here from the city. I am (B) [incredibly / incredible] disappointed that the town council installed these at great cost without any public consultation. No one asked me if I wanted stadium grade lighting in front of my house. This is another example of city politicians solving problems that don't exist at great expense to taxpayers. In this world, being smart or competent isn't enough. People sometimes don't recognize talent when they see it. Their vision is clouded by the first impression we give and that can lose us the job we want, or the relationship we want. The way we present ourselves can speak more ①eloquently of the skills we bring to the table, if we actively cultivate that presentation. Nobody likes to be crossed off the list before being given the opportunity to show others who they are. Being able to tell your story from the moment you meet other people is a skill that must be actively cultivated, in order to send the message that you're someone to be considered and the right person for the position. For that reason, it's important that we all learn how to say the appropriate things in the right way and to present ourselves in a way that appeals to other people — tailoring a great first impression.

When encounters between strangers are common, then some kind of governance is necessary based not on their unique relationship as individuals, but on generic principles: "All are equal under the law." Laws in the form of explicit codes are never found in pre-civilized peoples, nor are they necessary. It is no accident that as modern society grows increasingly anonymous, and as we pay strangers to perform more and more life functions, the reach of the law extends further and further into every corner of life. (한 세대 전에 비공식적으로 해결된 분쟁은 오늘날 서면 규칙에 따라 일상적으로 관리되고 있다). Indeed, without some kind of formal standard we would feel insecure, for we would literally be at the mercy of strangers. Young children can be quite unforgiving because they deal in logic that is self-centered, unrealistic, and dominated by emotion. The same can be true of adolescents. For the first time they begin to see that the adult world is complex, imperfect, and at times unfair — but still a world in which they have to live. (①) This, in large part, accounts for the heightened levels of anger in these early years. (②) As you grow older, forgiveness is more of an option. Child logic no longer prevails. (③) You come more and more to acknowledge and accept the fact that we're all frail creatures. (④) We hurt each other, intentionally or not, as we journey through life. Time devoted to family responsibilities influences a woman's opportunity for leisure. Care for children and older relatives are family responsibilities that are mostly performed by women. (A), the birth of a woman's first child has a dramatic influence on a woman's leisure. Often women will organize their leisure around their family tasks and duties, while men are much less likely to allow family to interfere with their leisure. As a result, women's own leisure experiences may be constrained. Research studies have ①documented that women put much time and effort into guaranteeing that family leisure activities are positive experiences for their family at the cost of their own leisure desires and interests. Many students think that the way to study is to sit in a chair and bear down on their books and notes as long as they can. Wrong. Your brain doesn't like that. Pressing your brain into unending service becomes stressful after the first hour. Its efficiency will go down and you'll start to tire. The research on effective cognitive functioning shows that optimal study spurts of twenty to forty minutes are the ideal amount of time for understanding and retaining information. So taking a break actually helps your performance. When you don't take planned, occasional breaks, your sympathetic nervous system pushes you into burnout mode. Studying for two to three hours nonstop is counter-productive and it can turn into a chronic ①drain on the person's available energy.

Countless variations on the marshmallow study on children have been done over the years. By far the most interesting finding is that individuals' performance can be manipulated by increasing the stress they're under. All sorts of stressors have been studied. For example, subjects might be asked to think about or look at something distressing. They might be exposed to a loud noise or a strong smell while doing the task. The testing room might purposefully be made too hot, too cold, or too crowded. Studies show that the greater the emotional, physical, or psychological stress is, the harder it is for us to delay gratification. That tells us that a child's ability to resist an impulse is first and foremost a matter of ㉠arousal: the result of too much stress and the effect this has on energy reserves. How hard is it to think clearly when you're stressed out or exhausted? Notice how much easier it is to resist a temptation when you're feeling calm.
